Office of Consumer Affairs: Jeffrey Donofrio, Esq. (“OCA”)

Mr. Barger, the RWA’s Water Quality Manager, provided a Lead and Copper update. He stated that the RWA is working with CDM Smith, an engineering and consulting firm, who has extensive experience with lead and copper rule revisions and will work with the RWA to develop a plan going forward. This undertaking is the result of a revision to the federally regulated lead and copper rule and contains various parts and focal areas. The team working on the project consists of approximately 14 members of the RWA from various areas within the organization. Currently, the RWA is focusing on service line inventories, which information is due to be submitted to the state in October 2024, and searching for sub-contractors in areas of communications, inventory mapping, field investigation, corrosion control treatment, and the distribution of lead particulate filters. Inventory mapping is expected to take the bulk of time, as the team will need to review historical information to determine where pipes are located and address unknowns. He stated that once the information is compiled it would be converted to electronic format for geographic placement.

Mr. Barger reported that Ms. Kowalski, the RWA’s Vice President of Financial Reporting & Analysis, is actively working with the state health department and the Drinking Water State Revolving Fund program for information on grant and financing opportunities. Ms. Capone, the RWA’s Director of Public Affairs, is also working with subcontractors to develop a communication plan for the RWA’s municipal partners, schools, daycares, and state departments. The RWA will also be scheduling meetings with communities to address concerns and answer questions.

Mr. Barger stated that next steps included contacting customers for information, working public on communications and material, addressing concerns, developing sampling protocols, searching for funding opportunities, and upgrading information technology.
